Introduction

My name is Nell Anvoid and I'm a 42-year-old divorce attorney. I have seen both sides of divorce—the good and the ugly, so I was particularly intrigued with Paige's work when I read it.

I just work two blocks away from the Library, so it was easy enough to walk over here to hear Paige's talk and learn what she'd be working on next—I guess you could call me a fan.

Round Three

Question Aaron Debois:

“Mr. Debois...why are you here, as you pointed out, looking at new demographics of people and scouting for possible new product ideas? Don't you have employees that you pay to do that very same thing?”

Ask Landon Waters:

“Mr. Waters, you seem to be asking a lot of questions. Care to tell us where you were while Ms. Turner was being murdered?”

When asked why you're asking so many questions:

“I'm a lawyer...I'm trained to ask questions and get to the bottom of a case.”

Round One

When asked if you'd ever met Paige before, reply:

“Yeah, I did. I actually worked with her once upon a time on a previous book.”

When asked about why no one had ever heard of your work with Paige, reply:

Shrug and say:

“I was uncredited.”

Ask Beau Napateet:

“Mr. Napateet...did you see anything suspicious? Did you interact with Ms. Turner at all? Get any feelings from behind the scene?”

Round Two

Accuse Hugh Conduit and Anita Lotte:

“Mr. Conduit and Ms. Lotte—I noticed you head off toward the hallway earlier...what were you up to?”

When asked where you were during the murder, reply:

“I can’t know for sure, of course—there’s no time of death, but I was out here in the lobby the entire time, waiting for the event to begin.”
